Information Classification: General

Customer End-Markets: Independent Assessment of AI impacts by Category

Top 10 Categories	Independent Assessment of AI Impacts
Technology	Varies by segment; Workflow automation will drive some efficiency-driven role consolidation as adoption scales
Food Ingredients	AI improving quality control, traceability and supply-chain efficiency, with limited workforce impact
Finance	AI expanding across risk, compliance and customer ops, supporting productivity and streamlining of admin tasks
Pharma	AI enhancing formulation, screening and manufacturing processes, largely complementing specialist roles, while smoothing workflows
Food Services & Hospitality	AI helping optimise scheduling, labour management and waste reduction, gradually improving efficiency in routine operational areas
Marketing	Generative AI automating routine content and analytics tasks, shifting teams to more strategic and creative activity
Healthcare	AI is easing documentation, triage and scheduling, with efficiencies concentrated in administrative support rather than clinical roles
Fashion & Jewellery	AI is improving design support, trend-forecasting and personalisation, offering productivity gains without major changes to overall staffing
Aviation & Aerospace	AI adoption centres on predictive maintenance, training and operations, boosting reliability with modest efficiency benefits
International Yachting & Luxury	AI is enhancing safety systems, monitoring and maintenance, mainly augmenting onboard operations rather than reshaping the workforce
